

Say NO! To A Cashless Society

Remember this immortal quote from David Icke?

“Today if you go into a shop to buy food and your credit card is refused by the computer, you can pay with cash. What happens when there is no cash? You are at the mercy of the computer. If it refuses your card or microchip, you have no means to purchase anything.”

They laughed at him in 1991 when he pronounced himself a son of the Godhead. They were still laughing in 1995 when he wrote those words. Will they still be laughing when the corrupt Biden Administration introduces the digital dollar, when no one uses or is allowed to use cash anymore, when the IRS in the USA or the equivalent of whatever country you live in monitors your every transaction over six hundred dollars? When your money supply can be cut off in an instant on the whim of some faceless bureaucrat? And that's before we mention hacking.

In June this year, a columnist for the Guardian reported that only one in six payments was now made in cash; Rupert Jones didn't seem particularly bothered, but two years ago an ACLU blogger saw things very differently. Ignore his virtue signalling about “people of color”, neither billionaire Oprah Winfrey nor apparatchik Joy Reid will be the slightest bit bothered if the elites succeed in their goal for total world domination by effecting this essential plank. And it isn't only the elites who want to enslave us; listen to this idiot; his short video has been viewed on YouTube less than a hundred times in five years. Cash is the currency of criminals, he says. All criminals bar one - the state.
